Mrs. Edith Mau of Mokena Found Dead In Bed

Mrs. Edith Mau, a long time resident of Mokena was found dead in bed in her home on Front street at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning. It is said death was due to a sudden heart attack. Mrs. Mau had been ill with heart trouble off and on but of late appeared to be getting along very well. Her sudden death came as a great shock to all who knew her. Her friends had seen her Tuesday evening and she appeared in the best of spirits.

Mrs. Mau had just passed her 53rd birthday Sept. 5th.

The Thomas Johnson family occupied an apartment adjoining that of Mrs. Mau and visited with each other every day. When Mrs. Johnson noticed that Mrs. Mau was not about her home she called to her and not receiving any response she investigated and found Mrs. Mau dead in bed. Dr. E. G. MacMahon was called and he thought death had occurred shortly after Mrs. Mau retired Tuesday evening. Mrs. Johnson last saw Mrs. Mau alive about nine o'clock Tuesday evening. She had been employed as a waitress at Morry's Restaurant but Tuesday evening was her night off.

Mrs. Mau is survived by one son Charles, one sister, Mrs. Emma Duprus, Lansing, Ill., four nieces residing in Chicago, one nephew of New York and a host of friends.

Mrs. Mau was born in Montreal, Canada Sept. 5, 1889 and had a family background of famous persons. She was a descendant of the famous English poet Milton.

Charles is in the Navy and is stationed in Calif. He is to arrive here Saturday. Mrs. Mau had received a letter from her son Tuesday and told her friends she had answered it the same day. Charles enlisted in the navy last spring and his mother was very proud of him as many of the men members of her family were soldiers in the last World War.

Mr. Mau died a number of years ago. He had held important positions with the Fairbanks-Morse Co., in Chicago and Mrs. Mau also was in the employ of this firm for many years.

Mrs. Mau was a very sincere friend and neighbor and very devoted mother.

There was a note of tragedy in an incident which occurred just before her death. She had written and sent a letter to her son and before the letter could reach him, a telegram was speeding on its way telling him that his mother had died.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon in the Hirsch Funeral home in Tinley Park at 2 o'clock. Burial will be made in the St. John cemetery in Mokena.

Rev. Theo. Haelele of the St. John's Evan. church of Mokena will officiate.

On Tuesday, Nov. 3rd, 1942, a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Illinois will be submitted to the voters of the State for adoption or rejection.

The sales tax paid on food by each of us during the year amounts to a considerable sum, and as the proposed amendment, the explanation of the subject, I urge you to read the proposed amendment, the explanation and the reasons why it should be ratified by the voters. The proposed amendment, if adopted, would give the General Assembly the power to exempt the sale of food from the operation of the sales tax.

To enable you to exercise the right to vote, it is highly important that you be registered from the address where you reside, and it is my pleasure to assist you in every way possible to exercise this right, but I must have your cooperation.

I urge you to register and have your friends register at once. Do not wait for your precinct registration as it will be impossible to have the 75,000 voters of Will County register in that time. Also remember the weather may not be favorable on their registration days. Don't wait. Register!

500,000 High School Youths Will Receive Pre-Flight Training

Nation to Get Jump Over Axis by Reaching Students For Future Aviation Career

It's an ironical twist of fate that the most far-reaching change in our modern educational system was set in motion by a war.

As September rolls around, public, private and parochial high schools throughout the nation will have radically altered their curricula to include instruction in pre-flight training under the auspices of the Air Training Corps of America, working in conjunction with the Civil Aeronautics Administration and the U. S. office of education.

Educators themselves readily admit that the war, with the attention it has focused on aviation, must be credited in large measure for the speed and efficiency with which ATCA's program has been launched, although the program's peacetime objectives are considered equally important.

Studying With New Interest. Regardless of cause, this September some 500,000 boys who voluntarily are enrolling in ATCA units will be studying algebra, geometry, physics, and other subjects with a new interest. They'll be enthusiastic about subjects they once considered "dry" because these studies will be taught in terms of aviation.

During five, or more, hours each week, ATCA members will study subjects in pre-flight training such as air navigation, communications, aerodynamics, meteorology, safety, and the structure and design of engines.

And if there are those who doubt the enthusiasm with which boys are taking these courses,

The theory of flight becomes a real thing to this student as, stick in hand, he controls the model plane while the wind tunnel, extreme left, whips a stiff breeze in the "flier's" face. This is another part of the course given in the pre-flight ATCA training throughout the nation. This lad some day may become an expert aviator in the U. S. army or navy.

End of War Will Mark Aviation's Golden Age

America invented the airplane—yet the greatest single threat to our security today is the plane itself.

Having created the means by which man could fly, America failed miserably to recognize the significance of its own invention. It remained for other nations to grasp the airplane's enormous possibilities—to visualize it as a gigantic instrument of peace and war.

It remained for other nations to sense the possibilities of training—not just a small segment—but all its youth, to be air-minded and air-wise.

Americans have been caught napping. But, if a determined group of American citizens have their way, this will not, cannot, happen again. These determined citizens have united to form the Air Training Corps of America.

Wings for America at Peace.

No informed person will deny that the end of this war will mark the true beginning of the Aviation age.

There will be new markets to be won, new lands to be developed. And in this post-war race for trade, aviation will play a major role. In America and throughout the world, the highways of commerce will be in the air. In transportation, a thousand as yet undreamed-of facets of our daily life, men trained in aviation will be the leaders of tomorrow. And the nation which molds these leaders will be itself a leader.

In training its youth for aviation, America is assuring its sons a rich they need only visit one of the schools where the ATCA courses already have been introduced. There these youngsters can be seen tackling the fundamental problems of aviation with an eagerness that is surprising.

They build their own model planes to scale, following specifications provided by the army and navy. These planes perform a useful function in the classes on spotting, where ATCA members learn how to distinguish one type from another at a casual glance and from any angle.

New Style School Arguments.

The visitor will see these boys arguing over a problem in plane design—discussing where stress and strain will affect the craft—as though the chart on the wall were a real bomber and they were going to take off in it themselves.

In classes on communications the pupils will be taking down the dots and dashes of the Morse code with the same zeal they might put into remembering the signals for an off-tackle play on the football field.

In classes on engine structure, in physics, in algebra, in whatever these future fliers now are studying in their pre-flight courses, the same

TRYING HARD

On the drill field, where members of ATCA units learn marching formations and take calisthenics to build them up physically, these lads show the same earnest attitude. They're trying hard every minute, so that sometime they can earn the right to fly a plane for the army or navy, or become professional fliers in civilian life.

degree of youthful eagerness is apparent everywhere.

This attribute of the Air Training courses in secondary schools, as much as the fact that the new studies have called for a complete overhauling of the curricula, is the reason that educators are quick to acknowledge that the system of teaching is going through the most radical change it ever has seen.

And They Like It!

They find it adding to their own enthusiasm to be met with such a ready response on the part of their pupils. When "x plus y" can be something to do with a pursuit plane

Future Pilots

Students at Albert Leonard high school, New Rochelle, N. Y., being instructed by teacher Frederick L. Lobdell on plane stresses and strain in an aerodynamics class. They are all ATCA students with visions of the day when they'll be flying their own plane.

Model Builder

This ATCA student is building his own model plane from army and navy specifications. Such practice gives youth throughout the U. S. first-hand knowledge of planes they hope some day to fly.

and "a times b" has something to do with increasing the already terrific speed of a giant bomber, it's something which both teacher and pupil find exciting.

ATCA members present a dashing appearance in their uniforms especially designed for the corps. Jack-ets, shirts and trousers of the uniform are all in a matching tone of gray-blue. Ties are navy blue and buttons on the jacket are silver-toned. The caps have a piping of bright red and the same color appears again in the single stripe on each sleeve cuff. The red and white ATCA insignia is attached to the upper left sleeve.

Considering the spirit it has injected into the system of teaching, it is not surprising that ATCA courses are finding a ready welcome in the schools.

As for the army and navy—they, too, are all for it. They have long recognized that the best professional flier is the one who has been trained from youth. They realize the importance of the program in filling the lack that has existed for providing training in the fundamentals of aviation.

Objectives of ATCA have been endorsed by Robert A. Lovett, assistant secretary of war for air, and by Robert Hinkley, assistant secretary of commerce and founder of the Citizens Pilot training program.

Sponsoring the work of the ATCA are some of the outstanding men and women in the country, including Bernard Baruch, James A. Farley, Alfred E. Smith, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, chairman of the Pan-American games committee; C. R. Smith, ex president of American airlines; Robert Hinkley, assistant secretary of commerce, and Mrs. Colin Kelly, widow of the American air hero.

That's the story of ATCA.

It's one of those things created during war which is not necessarily a part of war. It will, educators feel confident, live long after the war is over, and the ways of peace returned again, because it is inextricably tied up with aviation—and aviation itself has many long and vigorous years stretching ahead of it.

for combat duty. It has materially reduced training casualties.

Not all of these boys, of course, become pilots. One of the important benefits of this training is the fact that it "screens" the boys into the particular job in air or ground crew for which they are best qualified.

Furthermore, it gives them the essential psychological conditioning that their own job, whatever it may be, is all-important.

Naturally, an important part of the program is a carefully worked out course of training to promote physical fitness, to make the youth of America strong, hardened and ready for the tasks that lie ahead.

Members of the Air Training Corps of America will also receive basic training in the manual of arms and military drill, and will be schooled in the highest ideals of discipline and patriotism.

ATCA's Role in the War Effort. In undertaking to set up pre-flight squadrons in the nation's high schools, the Air Training Corps of America is co-ordinating its work with that of other organizations interested in the progress of aviation.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration, working with and through educators who have a thorough grounding in aviation and aviation problems, have done a splendid job of preparing practical, easily understood textbooks in the various phases of pre-flight training.

How the Censors Denied Knowledge Of Air Pictures . . . 2 Cabinet Members' Economic Views . . .

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

Washington.—Sometimes it seems as if the army and navy should have a fictional department. Not to invent tall stories to divert the populace, or even the enemy, but to keep abreast of ideas about warfare developed by amateurs who make their living by writing fiction.

Take the recent case, for instance, of photographs given out by the government showing how alleged markings in fields resulted in arrows or other signs pointing directly at important war factories. One is obliged to assume that these photographs, and the stories that went with them, were given out in good faith. Anything else would be unthinkable.

The fact that they were later denied, and put in the "looking under beds" category, is not the point.

Now it so happens that just such markings, produced by cutting crops in certain ways, or by other devices, which would reveal important directions to aviators flying over them, were actually used by the Japs when they attacked Hawaii on December 7. So the officials who learned of these alleged markings in fields near important war production factories a few weeks ago were entirely justified in being interested. In fact it might have been forgiven them if they had gotten a bit rough with those responsible for these particular markings.

Fiction Story Year Ago

But if they had read some fiction a year or more ago in widely circulated magazines they might have acted differently. In the case of a serial which was probably read by more than a million Americans the same sort of thing, generally, was discovered in Britain back in the 1940 days. Fortunately, the author was not handicapped by publicity men. He did not have the commanding officers rush to the newspapers with the story. Instead the traitorous signs were changed—and changed in such a way that they resulted in destruction for many of the attacking airplanes.

But surely if the enemy is depending on some markers, and these markers are discovered, the censors should forbid anything being printed about it. Can't the markers be changed to point to some fake plant or city such as the Germans are alleged to have constructed by the hundreds in order to protect important objectives?

Or is it that the censors believe the aim of any attacking pilots will be so bad that they will be bound to hit something important if they are trying to hit something else?

In short, how about a little intelligence in the intelligence service?

Harold Ickes

Henry Morgenthau Jr.

In many respects Henry Morgenthau Jr. has one of the most surprising combinations of economic views in the federal administration. To understand how amazing the man is, it is necessary to consider a few basic factors, the most important of which is his absolute devotion and slavish obedience to President Roosevelt.

Morgenthau and Harold L. Ickes have the faculty of sounding off in public print, or before committees, most sensationally, and then quickly coming to heel when the President frowns. No matter what either thinks, or has said, it is the will of the President which will guide their actions.

Both like their jobs—could not be pried loose from them—and hence never risk the break which would restore them to private circulation. But right there the similarity ends. Ickes generally gets out of step on the radical side.

When Morgenthau gets out of step it is usually on the conservative side. His best friends say that he would rather be a conservative, if only the President would approve. This is just a theory, though accepted by people who not only know him well, but have studied his actions.

It could never grow out of his private conversations. They run to favoring social service, and that sort of thing, growing out of his wife's championship of most of Mrs. Roosevelt's hobbies.

Of all his public utterances, one on the conservative side with respect to which he has never been publicly spanked, and never been made to retract, relates to silver. Morgenthau is against the government silver policy, and has been since its inception. He saw no point in trying to bid up the world price to the $1.29 an ounce the silver fanatics wanted. He watched the experiment fail, at a cost of hundreds of millions to the treasury, and to the enormous profit of foreign speculators. The 50 per cent special tax on silver profits took care of the domestic speculators.

'Ghost' Found in House, Clearing Up Old Mystery

It's a Murderer Who Slew Owner When Caught Rifling Icebox.

DENVER.—Trapped in the tiny attic of a house that children believed haunted, a wispy, half-starved man admitted, Detective Captain Childers said, beating to death the aged home owner and then living furtively in a cubby hole of the house for nine months.

Gaunt and clad in old clothes tied together with a rope, the man said he was Matthew Cornish, 59 years old, once an advertising salesman in Tonawanda, N. Y. Later, Captain Childers said, the man asserted the name was fictitious and declined to give any other.

The man was captured in the small brick house of Philip Peters, 73-year-old retired railroad auditor, who was found beaten to death in a bedroom last October 17.

"I killed him because he caught me robbing the ice box," Captain Childers quoted Cornish as saying. Investigating children's tales of a phantom, eerie sounds and ghostlike lights in the modest home in a quiet North Denver residential section, police saw the front door open slowly. A pale face appeared in the opening. The officers ran toward the door, but it was slammed shut.

Captain Childers and Detective Fred Zarnow smashed down the door and entered in time to see a tattered trouser leg disappear into a hole leading to the attic.

Caught by Accident.

Detective Zarnow shot a flashlight beam through the tiny opening and saw Cornish cowering in the loft, about four feet square and too low for a man to stand erect. He seized Cornish, barefoot and weighing only 75 pounds, by the wrist and dragged him out.

Captain Childers said Cornish told him he discovered the cubbyhole by accident while prowling in the Peters home last fall, and decided it would make an ideal spot to "hole up for the winter."

For many days and nights, Cornish related, he lived in the attic, his presence unknown and unsuspected by Mr. Peters.

He had the run of the house for short periods daily, when Mr. Peters would visit his wife at a hospital.

"He lay in wait among the spiders and watched his victim like a spider himself," said Captain Childers. He quoted Cornish as relating: "Every night I'd listen at the attic hole until I heard him snoring. Then I'd crawl down and go through the icebox. I'd take just enough so it wouldn't be too noticeable. I'd carry it back up to my nest and eat it."

"I found part of an old crystal set radio in one of the closets, and a pair of earphones. I fixed it up so it would work."

"I used to shave even, with the old man's razor."

Cornish told of spying on Mr. Peters several times as he put money into a cigar box, but was unable to learn where the box was hidden.

Clubb'd With Old Gun.

"Well, this particular afternoon (last October 17, when Mr. Peters was killed) I was awfully hungry. I went down to the icebox and found a roast. I started eating it right there, squatting by the box."

"I didn't hear the old man come in, but suddenly there he was in the kitchen door. He started for me, so I grabbed up an old rusted gun which lay on a cabinet. It broke when I hit him. I knocked him down."

Twice again, he said, he hit Mr. Peters when the man regained consciousness.

He fled to his attic hideout and stayed there for days while police searched the house. They thought the door was only a ceiling repair.

Subsequently, Cornish related, he was able to creep from the house and forage food by raiding neighborhood iceboxes and by prowling stores.

Several caches of money were found in the house by police after Mr. Peters' death.

Mrs. Peters, who was in a hospital when her husband was killed, later returned to her home and lived there for several months, but she never detected the presence of the attic dweller. She now lives with a son in Grand Junction, Colo.

Tiny Pocket Radio Is

Developed by Inventor

CLEVELAND.—In not so very long—it is hoped—you're going to be able to reach into your pocket and pull out a radio.

Engineers have developed a pocket receiver not much larger than the average notebook—six inches high and about two inches thick. The tiny radio was described to more than 300 technical experts attending the Institute of Radio Engineers' convention held here recently.

The miniature set has a crystal receiver which fits into the ear something like a hard-of-hearing aid. The receiver is connected to the pocket set by a wire, which also contains the antenna for the unit. It contains two smaller batteries and tubes the size of peanuts.

The diminutive sets probably will not be marketed until after the war.

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final bigging this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty.

The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all oversalted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 80 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."—Adv.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

THE Secret OF THE MARSHBANKS

• BY KATHLEEN NORRIS •

©NORRIS W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Charlotte (Cherry) Rawlings, an orphan since she was seven years old, has been at Saint Dorothea's school for girls. She knows almost nothing about her early history, and has gradually come to realize that like other girls at the school she has no family. Judge Judson Marshbanks, her co-guardian with Emma Haskell, a trained nurse, arranges for her to leave school. Judge Marshbanks tells her that Emma has gotten her a secretarial position with the very wealthy Mrs. Porteous Porter, of San Francisco, where Emma is now housekeeper. The judge tells Cherry that money was left with Emma for Cherry's school expenses. She is to first go to the Marshbanks home where she will meet the judge's mother, his brother Fred's debutante daughter, Amy, and Marshbanks' young second wife, Fran. When she arrives the judge tells her Amy and Fran are going out to dinner and he dines alone with Cherry. She feels ill at ease in her convent clothes. As they eat a young man enters and Marshbanks introduces him as Kelly Coates.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER III

Judge Marshbanks' visitor, twisting a little to look at Cherry, acknowledged the introduction only with a nod and with a level, curious half-smile, and went on talking in a low tone.

"You're not going to this jam-boree tonight, Jud?" he said.

"Good heavens, no! But I may pick the girls up there if we play late enough. I'm going to the club. I ought to look in at the Randall party, I suppose. You dressing later?"

"Oh, I don't think I'll go at all! I think I'll go home," the visitor observed. "But, of course, I had to see what our deb looked like tonight. Isn't this the first big affair for her?"

"She was down here a few minutes ago, sure that she was going to look awful and that something was growing on the tip of her nose," the older man said in tolerant amusement. "She's dining at the Rogerses' in Burlingame, going down with Fran, and will come back to the party."

"Dining?" said Kelly Coates, flinging up his wrists to see the time. "What time do these budlets dine? It's eight now."

"The dinner is supposed to be at eight—seventeen miles away," Judge Marshbanks said. "But they have to kill time until midnight, so they're not worrying!"

They talked on of places and personalities unknown to Cherry, and Cherry had a chance, over a foamy soufflé of chocolate and creamy stripes, to study the newcomer. The judge was tall and lean; Kelly Coates was rather more squarely built, with big, hard, nervous hands, fair hair combed back from his square, fine face, keen eyes and mouth that Cherry found a certain fascination in watching.

To her he seemed old, but not as old, certainly, as the judge. Thirty, perhaps. She learned from what she could not help overhearing that he was an artist, that he lived in some place across the bay called Sausalito.

Two women came downstairs. One was a girl of Cherry's age, as fresh as a spray of acacia bloom in a fluffy frock of palest yellow, with spidery yellow orchids pinned at her shoulder. An innocent-eyed girl, with a lovely heart-shaped little face framed in soft curls, a delicately poised little body and discontented blue eyes.

The other woman was dark too, but of an entirely different type. Cherry's first impression was that she was ugly. She was tall and thin, with a long face, deep-set dark eyes, and silky straight black hair that was cut in a deep bang. Her skin was clear and pale, her lips startling in contrast, for her mouth—wide, soft and full—was colored the flame red of a poppy.

"Skunks," she said simply. Her voice, hoarse and deep, thrilled suddenly in the silence. Both men were on their feet as she came languidly to the table. "Of course you both know you're polecats!" she said.

The girl, after having said, "Sam's here, he won't come in," had vanished back in the direction of the hall again. Judson Marshbanks introduced Cherry to his wife, who acknowledged the little ceremony with an absent glance in Cherry's direction.

"You let me do all the dirty work," said Fran Marshbanks, in a lazily annoyed tone. And again her voice shocked Cherry with its very beauty; it was a rich, low voice that seemed always about to be broken with laughter or tears or both, a shattering, trembling voice that yet clearly indicated its owner's boredom and indifference and pride.

"Jud, you are running out on this party," his wife accused him.

"Well, my dear, a debutante party—" he pleaded.

"I know. But you owe it to Amy." But she did not care very much, either way. "As for Mr. Coates," she went on, carelessly reproachful; "he is apparently entirely without soul; he ought to be cultivating rich, homely girls who want their portraits painted, and here is an occasion when he could meet, not one of them, but all of them! Not even dressed!"

"My dress clothes are circa President Harrison," Mrs. Marshbanks, the painter said. "If I painted anyone it would be yourself, and you say you won't sit for me."

"Because I won't go to Sausalito and dress in a transformed barn," Fran answered composedly.

"You've never seen it," he said.

"I know it's like that. Besides, I'm just bringing Amy out in society," the woman went on, "and I have maternal obligations."

"Maternal! You! What is she to you? Sister-in-law?"

"I wish Jud's mother were here to hear you! Family intricacies are meat and drink to her," Fran said.

"She's getting back from Florida this week, by the way; you might come in for a cocktail and meet her. She'd be a subject for you! No," she added, reverting to the original topic, "Amy's not my sister-in-law. She's my—work that out, Jud. What's Amy to me?"

"She's my brother's child," he elucidated. "She's my niece, and that makes her your niece by marriage."

"That makes her my niece by marriage," Fran repeated, turning the slow battery of her dark eyes upon Kelly.

"I'll have to come here and paint you at the house," Kelly said in an odd voice after a moment.

"Ah, well, if you could do that!"

"I don't see that we're such criminals, Jud and I," said Kelly, "you've two perfectly good escorts, out there in the hall. I don't dance; I drink very little; I hardly know these people—Why on earth should I go?"

"To be with me," Fran suggested, with an oblique glance at her husband and the hint of an unwilling smile.

"You'll be dancing or playing bridge?"

"I'll be bored. I know that. I'd much rather stay at home and read Coventry Patmore. But for one thing," Fran said confidentially to the painter, somewhat lowering her tone as the judge went away to answer a telephone call, "I do it for Amy. After being so much abroad with Jud's mother, spending winters in Palm Springs and New York, she's out of everything. We have to give her some sort of party next month. I want to refresh my mind as to how it's done. It isn't my sort of thing at all!"

"I know it isn't," he said, his keen gaze fixed on her.

"You don't really know me at all," her fine, nervous ivory fingers were busy with the delicate lace of her handkerchief. "You've seen me—three times, is it?"

"Dante saw Beatrice once," he said.

"It's so pleasant," said the woman, "to talk to a man who doesn't think Dante's a hospital and who pronounces Beatrice properly."

"I shall hope as our friendship ripens into real affection," Kelly said with a little inclination of his head, "to please you in more important ways."

"Our friendship is going to ripen? How nice!"

"Don't be too sure it will be nice. It may be—distinctly unpleasant!" he warned her lightly.

She looked at him through half-closed lids at this, in a silence so long that Cherry, fussing with cheese and coffee, could feel her own heart beating quickly.

"You interest me," Fran presently said quietly.

"I can't think at the moment of anything I'd rather do," he answered in the same deliberate, half-serious fashion.

The judge returned before either spoke again, for although there was time for more words, Cherry noted that they did not say them but sat looking steadily at each other for a full half minute before Fran dropped her eyes. Amy came in from the hall too, followed by two young men in formal evening attire and there was a little stir of departure.

When they all left the room Cherry followed, not knowing what else to do, and slowly mounted the stairs between the palms, praying in her heart that no one would notice her or speak to her. Completely concealed and sitting down on the stairs until they should be gone, she heard Fran's voice just below her.

"You'll have to ask Jud that," the woman said.

"Who is she?" said the judge's goodhumored voice, evidently repeating a question. "Why, it's a guardianship case. I'm to turn her over to Mrs. Porteous Porter on Monday; she's to do secretarial work for the old lady."

"If I had seen her dress I might have copied it for tonight," said Amy with a little titter.

Fran and Amy and the two young men in evening clothes went away laughing, the big street door shut, and Judge Marshbanks and Kelly Coates came back across the hall and stood chatting for a moment before the artist said that he must start on his way to Sausalito, and the judge went off to his bridge game. But by this time the stairway was empty, and Cherry was back in the luxurious, dimly lighted guest room, standing perfectly still at one of the big windows, looking out into the darkness of the unfamiliar world, studying the scene of the night city with eyes that saw nothing, trying to think with her mind and soul one whirl of furious emotion.

Rage and shame and jealousy and a hundred other new and wretched feelings possessed her. Shaken and throbbing and blinded, she rested her face against the cool glass of the window and pressed one hand against the turbulent pain that was her heart.

Now, for the first time in her life, the significance of being a Saint Dorothea's girl swept over her. A girl to be laughed at and pitied and despised. It was a place for girls who, innocent enough themselves, were nevertheless victims of circumstances that were not innocent; girls who must stay out of the public eye summer and winter alike; girls who had no home to which to go, no families to welcome them and miss them.

A knock at her door made her return in quick alarm toward the room. Molly, the nice-looking little maid, came in and delivered to Cherry a message as she expertly replaced towels and turned down the bed:

"The judge sent you up the magazines, Miss Rawlings, and says he was sorry not to say good night, and will you please have breakfast with him at half past eight. And May is to go downtown with you at ten, if that wasn't too early for you. And am I to call you?"

Cherry, confused, agreed to everything with a bashful thank you and a good night, and when the maid was gone took herself seriously in hand, brushed her hair vigorously, enjoyed a luxurious bath with every accessory in the way of salts and powders and scents that the bathroom afforded, got herself comfortable in bed and turned magazine pages for an absorbed hour.

But when the lights were out she fell to thinking again, and the humiliation and pain of her arrival at the Marshbanks mansion slowly came back, detail upon detail.

Fran, Cherry's thoughts ran on, had seemed ugly at first, but when you watched the expressions of her face for a moment, and heard her voice she did not seem ugly any more. Much more than Amy she seemed the sort of person an artist would like to paint.

And he was an artist, of course—that man with the tremendous laugh and the tremendous voice, so sure of himself, as he folded his big arms and entered into conversation with the judge, so more than sure of himself when he lowered his tones, and when a half-smile twitched at his mouth, and when he exchanged careless smiling words with Fran.

To have a man like that, at least know that one was alive! To have him obliged—forced to admire one for something, for anything! To call him by his name and have him smile when one unexpectedly encountered him . . .

It was of Kelly Coates that she was thinking as she dropped off at last into exhausted sleep.

The re-encounter with her old friend Emma and the introduction to her new home and to her new employer proved much less of a strain than Cherry had feared they would. Her brief visit at Judge Marshbanks' house had somewhat prepared her for elegance and luxury.

JOSEPH SOLD INTO SLAVERY

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 37:23-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—Love envieth not.—I Corinthians 13:4, R.V.

Does it pay to trust God? Is He really concerned about the affairs of men? Does He know the trials and the heartaches of His children? These are the crying questions of today, and they find their answer in God's dealings with men of the past. The story of Joseph has many interesting and instructive phases, but perhaps the most important just now is the truth of our lesson, "The Lord saith . . . them that honor me I will honor."

We first find Joseph as he learns that

I. Jealousy Bears Bitter Fruit (vv. 23-30).

Joseph was his father's favorite and was shown that favoritism in many ways, but it was perhaps most fully expressed in the coat of many colors. This was a luxurious long robe with sleeves, indicating that he was a gentleman and not to do ordinary work of one who wore the sleeveless, knee-length tunic. His brothers deeply resented this evidence of the father's favor.

The dreams which Joseph rather innocently yet perhaps unwisely told to his brothers and his honest report of their wicked behavior fanned the flame of jealousy into a consuming fire which threatened his life. But God, through Joseph's brother Judah and through the opportunity they had to make money out of selling him into slavery, kept him for His own purposes.

May we not learn that the darkest hour may be the time of God's deep interest and directing power. The only way strong men can be developed is by suffering hardness and trial. "God wants iron saints, and since there is no way of imparting iron to the moral nature than by letting His people suffer, He lets them suffer (Heb. 12:11)" (Meyer).

Parents should also learn here the dangers of favoritism among children. It is one of the most destructive of evil influences that can enter a home. It hurts the child who is favored, alienates the other children, and it destroys confidence in parents and respect for their authority. Let's have none of it!

II. Deceit Attempts to Conceal Sin (vv. 31-35).

One of the tragic things about sin is that a wicked act does not stand alone but leads into another sin to cover the first. In the case of Joseph's brethren, their sin against him was covered by deceit. They lied to the father and maintained that lie for years, even though they saw that their aged father was brokenhearted. How callous sin makes the heart of a man!

Yet the very fact that they lied to cover their sin indicates that they were ashamed to admit that they had fallen so low. James Strahan well says: "Evil never dares to be sincere. It always borrows the colors and wears the garb of innocence. It has a whole lifetime of hard labor in keeping up appearances. Hypocrisy is the tribute which all bad men have to pay to the ideal of goodness."

III. God Overrules Evil for Good (v. 36).

It was God's plan that Joseph should come to his greatest usefulness in his place of authority in Egypt, so He directed the sale of the young slave into the home of Potiphar, a leading officer of Pharaoh.

The story of Joseph's life in Potiphar's house is one of unusual interest. Faithfulness to duty, loyalty to God and truth led to shifting experiences of imprisonment and of favor, but ultimately he came out into the place of leadership in the government of Egypt. In this place God marvelously blessed and used him.

Since the matter of the relation of men to government is so much before us these days, it will be well to note that Scripture holds a very exalted view of the public servant. Paul says we are to "be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God" (Rom. 13:1). The Bible clearly teaches that every governmental agency and every public servant, from the policeman on the beat to the President in the White House, is only permitted to exercise authority over his fellowmen because God has ordained that there should be such government. Clear it is that every right-thinking official of state and nation should be humble, teachable, discreet, and wise in the exercise of his power, and God-fearing in the discharge of his responsibility.

Our lesson provides unusual opportunity for the teaching of proper family relationships, the right attitude toward government, as well as the blessed assurance and confidence which we may have who have entrusted our lives into the hands of God.

If you are ever stumped by the question of what to send a friend or relative in one of Uncle Sam's armed forces, here's a tip. If he smokes a pipe or rolls his own, nothing would please him more than a pound of his favorite tobacco. Surveys among the men themselves show that. Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco has long been known as the National Joy Smoke—it is the largest-selling smoking tobacco in the world. Local dealers are now featuring Prince Albert in the pound can as an ideal gift for service men who smoke a pipe or roll-their-own.—Adv.

A letter has been received from Harry Utte dated July 24 saying he was three days out. He says he feels fine and has suffered no sea sickness and gets good food. He says the Pacific certainly is beautiful and that the name 'Blue Pacific' means just that. He is glad he joined the Navy and can have an active part in outsmarting the Japs.

Mr. Utte's address is Harry, Martin Uthe, CM 2C, Carpenter's mate, 2nd Class, Co. A 6th Naval Constr. Batt. OUB, Care Postmaster, San Francisco, Cal. As is true with all service men, Mr. Utte would like to hear from his friends. While Victory News is wonderful, a letter from home makes the home town closer and friends not so far away.

Dear Friends:
Just a few lines to let you know that I have a changed address again and am sending my new address to you.

Your friend,
Pvt. Elmer Steinborn, Co. G 11 Inf. Atlantic, N. Carolina.

Newport, Rhode Island,
Aug. 14, 1942

Dear Friends:
Was glad to hear from you and am sorry that I didn't write before but the letter just reached me.

It went to Curtis Bay, Md. and this followed me to Boston, Mass. and found me in Newport, R. I. They've been shipping me all over the country. When I arrived in Curtis Bay they started up on the road to try and make sailors of us. They gave us 32 days of training. Then we were shipped to Boston receiving station for sea duty and then shipped to Newport, R. I. where I now am stationed. The things they teach are seamanship, all types of code, military counties, how to use all types of fire arms and mounted guns on ships. While in Boston I didn't see much of the town and what I did see wasn't much. Personally I'd rather be in Tinley or even Chicago. All we do down here in Newport is stand four or eight hour watches and to patrol duty out on sea. We don't go out far as yet but we stay from one to two days in the open. We clean the barracks up every morning and get calisthenics every afternoon when we're not on watch.

We swim in the ocean every day and the salty water is really nice to swim in. The food at the other places was OK but this place beats them all. We get Turkey twice a week and chicken every so often. They put the meals on a big table in big bowls and you help yourself. In our barracks we have most of the survivors from the Hamilton that was torpedoed up north. There weren't so many lives lost only about 25 or so but it made a great hole in our force on the sea and we or most of us will leave soon.

Well it won't be long and I'll be a second class seaman and there on to first class. I hope I can get a leave soon because if I don't get it now or before I'm shipped out it'll probably be a long time before I'll see home again. I miss Tinley very much because of not seeing the old town. Well in Boston I ran into a fellow I went to school with in Harvey. He is in the Navy. All the officers up here do alot for you. Well I guess I'll have to close now to go on guard duty and so I'll write again soon I was glad to hear from you and hope you'll write again.

Sincerely yours,
Irving Bettenhausen, MSCG, State Armory, Newport, R. I.

Dear Citizens Service Committee:

I receive the paper all the time. It sure makes me feel at home. The paper dated Aug. 7 I see you put my letter in. I was beginning to think you have forgotten me. I see you spelled my name wrong. You spelled it like this, Pvt. Eugene I. Coffey. This is the way I spell it, Pvt. Eugene Coffey. Just one more thing that is wrong. The Army is beginning to step on my toes because you have sent my mail under my old address. Please change to my new address. I don't like to be fussy, I just want to keep everybody happy. I want to thank you and everybody for sending me the package. It makes one feel that someone is thinking of him. A lot of my buddies have left for active duty. I hope I follow them very soon. The USO is giving a dance tonight, so I will have to close. I don't want to be late to swing all these pretty gals around. Give my regards to everybody.

Your pal,
Pvt. Eugene J. Coffey.

Mather Field
Saturday, August 22, 1942

Dear Folks:
Sorry I haven't written sooner but I've been awfully busy the last month or so. Now we're at Mather Field in advanced flying school. This Navigation course is darn tough but its sure interesting. And I like it a lot. Next Friday we start flying regularly and in 14 more weeks we'll graduate full fledged flying officers already. Haven't seen the T. P. Times for a couple of weeks. Guess it got lost in all the shifting around we've done.

Anyway my new address is Class 42-16. Co. G. Mather Field, Sacramento, Calif. We go to school about ten hours every day Monday thru Friday and get most of the weekend to ourselves. It's plenty hot here 110-120 most of the time. Being 90 miles from Frisco we don't get the cool ocean breeze either. Hello to everyone and before I forget it I thanks alot for the shaving kit. I've used it quite a bit already.

Sincerely,
Allan M. Boner

Dear Citizens Service Committee:

I got the package from you and I surely appreciate it but I don't smoke and I have to sell the cigarettes and I don't like to do that. I get the Tinley Park Times but they send it to Wyoming and I am in Ft. Bliss, Texas and it takes so long to get here. I am feeling fine and gained some weight we are working almost everyday except Saturday afternoon and Sunday. I would rather have something else instead of cigarettes if you dont mind sending something else. That's all for now and thank you.

Dear Friends of Tinley Park:

I received the package that you sent about the 21st, yesterday. Thanks a million. I am still about the same as usual. I cant think of anything else to write about. So I'll close hoping this finds you all in good health.

Sincerely,

Hi Folks:

Just received your package and would like to thank you. As you probably know, we have a little of Tinley here. Chuck Rich, Bob Wallin and Jack Freitag and Art Lehman also yours truly. I wish the two fellows I enlisted with could be here with us. So Freddy Willman is in Arkansas and Otto Becker is in Cal. Boy we sure did get pulled apart. We have a swell time here, just like old times, school is hard to get used to, but very interesting. With everything in consideration, this base is a swell place. The town of Lincoln is very pretty, also very friendly. I receive the Tinley Times regularly and really get a kick out of hearing what the other fellows are doing. I hope they are enjoying this as much as we are here. I know its work and plenty of it, but you have to admit fellows that you do get a certain kick out of working for Uncle Sam, dont you? Well I have plenty of homework to do, so until later,

So long,
Hally Hollwedel

No Deductions Will Be Made

Farmers who underplant their 1943 wheat allotments in order to increase their acreages of war crops next year will not suffer deductions from their AAA wheat payments for 1943, nor will their wheat acreage allotments be reduced in future years because of such diversions.

This information has been received at the offices of the Will and Cook county AAA committees from Lee M. Gentry, chairman of the Illinois AAA Committee. Mr. Gentry's full announcement follows:

Present supplies of wheat are more than sufficient for domestic needs for the next two years whereas the need for certain other commodities, such as soybeans, flaxseed, peanuts, for oil, dried beans, dried field peas and certain food crops, is likely to be even greater in 1943 than this year. Consequently, every wheat farmer who can divert some wheat acreage to these emergency war crops will be making a substantial contribution.

While definite goals for the special war crops have not been established, it is very unlikely that more will be grown than can be used.

It should be borne in mind that if no wheat whatsoever was needed on a farm for three consecutive years, the farm would be eligible only for a new farm allotment under the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. The total of new farm allotments in any county is limited to three percent of the total wheat acreage allotment for the county.

At The Roxy

It thrilled millions of readers in book form, and it will thrill millions more in the theaters audiences; this revealing story of a girl, who made friends on the wrong side of tracks and love on the other side in "Kings Row", upholding the superb performances of Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings and Ronald Reagan, which will be featured at the Roxy Theatre at Lockport Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

That smooth, slick satan in a top hat, plus a shaking trigger finger, Brian Donlevy, is dangerous to love more dangerous to hate in "A Gentleman After Dark", which will be featured at the Roxy Theatre, next Wednesday, and Thursday plus "About Face", with those two fighting sergeants of that laugh-fiesta, "Hayfoot", William Tracy, and Joe Sawyer.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 6.

The Golden Text was, "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way (Psalms 37: 23).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Know ye that the Lord he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture" (Psalms 100: 8).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Immortal man was and is God's image or idea, even the infinite expression of infinite Mind, and immortal man is coexistent and co-eternal with that Mind. God, the divine Principle of man, and man in God's likeness are inseparable, harmonious, and eternal. God and man are not the same, but in the order of divine Science, God and man co-exist and are eternal. God is the parent Mind, and man is God's spiritual offspring" (p. 386).

Economy Accent . . . Delicious Chicken Croquettes
(See Recipes Below.)

Budget Stretchers

What can I serve as a main course that won't take too many dishes? What can I give my large family that isn't too expensive? These are the two queries often asked by my readers. The answer to both questions is simple—a casserole. Easy to make, easy to serve, economical too, casseroles solve the main dish problem almost perfectly.

Almost? Yes, I say almost advisedly, because if the family ever becomes aware of your ulterior motives in serving casseroles, their interest in them becomes less, less and finally non-existent.

Make your casserole so delectable and so distinctive in flavor and no one will ever realize that it's packed with economy and you have a one-dish meal that's perfection plus.

Never overwork the casserole by trying to use up all the leftovers lining refrigerator and pantry shelves. Never swamp the flavors of the food so you strike a false note and confuse the sense of taste. Use good food and season with discrimination. Your result will be a real success.

Here are some new ideas I've compiled for you. Most of them of the food you have used often enough so they're old favorites, but in new dress! You'll like:

*Rice and Chicken Casserole. (Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups rice
2 cups milk
1½ tablespoons butter
2 eggs
2½ cups diced, cooked chicken
Boil rice in salted water until tender. Stir in butter, milk and eggs. Put a layer of this into a casserole, then chicken, more rice, etc. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until well browned.

Every now and then you've heard me talk about food affinities. Here's another I'd like to add to the list:

Lamb and Lima Bean Pie. (Serves 6)

2 pounds lamb neck, shanks or shoulder
1 pound dry lima beans
Salt, pepper
Celery salt

Soak lima beans overnight. Drain and place in a heavy kettle. Have lamb cut in 2-inch pieces. Add to beans, season and cover with water. Transfer to casserole and top with pimiento biscuit rings and bake in a moderately hot oven 20 to 25 minutes.

To make pimiento biscuit rings: add ½ cup coarsely chopped pimiento to baking powder biscuit recipe. You'll get your carbohydrates, proteins along with vitamins and minerals in this economical, hunger-satisfying dish good for family dinner or informal buffet entertaining:

American Goulash. (Serves 6)

½-pound package macaroni
1½ pounds hamburger
1 large onion, chopped
1 tablespoon fat

Lynn Says:

Store Food Wisely: There are no "Finders Keepers" but you may be the "Loser Weeper" if you do not store those vegetables properly.

Scientific experiments show that lettuce may lose 40 per cent of its vitamin C if kept at room temperature. Refrigerator recommended!

Spinach, left standing on pantry shelf, will be drained of its vitamin C by about one-third. Canned string beans lose about one-third of their vitamin C if they stand in a bowl at room temperature for six hours.

Short cooking time is recommended, too. Cabbage, for instance, loses 69 per cent of the elusive vitamin C and 72 per cent of its calcium and 50 per cent of its other minerals when these valuable nutrients go up in steam.

PRIVATE PURKEY INTERVIEWS A 'WAVE'

(Home on a short furlough, Oscar, unknown to Harriet, who is in the WAACs, saw his girl-friend Minerva, who has signed up in the women's naval auxiliary.)

Oscar—So you're a WAVE! What's the idea?

Minerva—I didn't want to be just a ripple or a backwash, like your friend Harriet.

Oscar—I heard you joined the navy to get smarter uniforms than they have in the women's army. The WAVES can profit by mistakes made by the WAACs.

Minerva—Do you think this war is a style show?

Oscar—You make me wonder.

Oscar—Can you splice a rope? Minerva—What do you think I'm joining, a rodeo?

Oscar—Can you box a compass?

Minerva—No, but I can wrap up a clock.

Oscar—Did you ever port your helm?

Minerva—No profanity please!

Oscar—Did you ever stow a skiff? Minerva—Stop lisping!

Oscar—I'm serious, Min. What is a starboard tack?

Minerva—You've got me there; I'm no carpenter.

Oscar—Gee, Min, you're awful ignorant.

Minerva—Otherwise why would I be standing here talking to you?

Oscar—Say, listen, why are you girls going to train for the navy at Smith college away up in Northampton?

Minerva—Because we thought it would sound funny to train sailors at Vassar.

Oscar—I see your uniforms are to be by Mainbocher of Paris.

Minerva—Isn't that wonderful? Oscar—It's better than by Mike Todd of Star and Garter. What will the regular navy think of that after all these years in the original John Paul Jones sailor suits?

Minerva—A woman sailor is expected to look better than a man.

Oscar—What difference does it make when she falls overboard?

Minerva—Listen, is this a date or a quiz program?

Oscar—Okay, admiral. I'll stow the question.

Minerva—

Thanks, Colonel!

'BALADE ON FEASTS AND FORAGINGS'

When gourmets to the board propel

Their paunchy selves for tasty fare,

Most nostrils quiver at the smell

Of food that master chefs prepare;

But if you wish that you were there,

Hold on—Lucullan tables lack

The virtues found when you prepare

The pleasures of a midnight snack.

At witching hour, when all is well,

A hungry man steals down the stair

Into the cook's own citadel,

To gather morsels extra rare

And strip unguarded cupboard bare;

Then to the bedroom creeping back,

Thus adding to adventure's flair

The pleasures of a midnight snack.

Prince, would you forget your thinning hair,

Your troubles state and cardiac?

Then try, for liberty from care,

The pleasures of a midnight snack.

Negative 'Maiden'

The word "maiden" is applied to many subjects besides an unmarried woman, points out Collier's. The adjective is used to designate a city that has never been taken, a plant that has never been plowed, a sword that has never been used, a male or female race horse that has never won an event and, in England, a session of a criminal court at which there are no prisoners for trial.

HAPPY choice for the girl who is soon returning to school! The tailored shirtwaist teamed with a full gathered dirndl skirt has the casual charm modern youngsters want. It is an outfit

Denatured alcohol will remove the stain made on tablecloths by colored candles.

Kerosene will soften boots and shoes that have been hardened by water and will render them as pliant as new.

Honey on cottage cheese, a dish centuries old, is being revived today.

If you make your own house-dresses, remember that the most comfortable ones have plenty of room.

The old family coffee pot can be kept sweet by occasionally boiling in it a strong solution of borax.

Put a little water, milk or cream into fudge frosting that thickens too quickly, stirring until it has the right consistency.

Rice?

No, Thank You,
Mr. Hirohito!

NOT as a steady diet. You've done pretty well on rice, but can you keep on doing it? What about Midway and the Coral Sea? Ever hear of Doolittle? MacArthur? Chennault?

What about the Solomon Islands? You can't get around it—those U. S. boys are better, man for man. And they're not sun-worshippers, either—just plain free men, well-fed and fighting mad. Sure it takes a lot of food to keep them going, but we've got what you haven't got, Hirohito . . . an army of free women fighting the home front because they know the need to fight! Not with guns. Not everyone can make shells or build airplanes. It takes an American woman just half of a split second to see where she fits in; the empty shelves at the grocery were enough of a hint for her. 50% more home-canning is our goal, and it's just like making bombs for Tokyo. No one in America will ever live on rice. We'll have fruits and fruit juices, vegetables and meats—home-canned for a few cents a jar.

Can you beat it, Mr. Hirohito? A war won—by women?

Porter Knew Where To Get Quicker Service

The young lovers were trying to find some quiet, secluded spot for a long embrace. But everywhere they went there were people, people, people. And the girl was shy.

Suddenly the man had a bright idea. Triumphant he led her to the railway station and, standing beside the door of a railway carriage as though seeing her off, kissed her fondly.

After the couple had repeated the experiment at four or five different platforms, a sympathetic porter strolled up and whispered to the young man:

"Take 'er rahnd to the bus stop, mate. They goes ev'ry three minutes from there."

Constipation! Why Not Get and Keep "Regular"?

One of the commonest causes of constipation is simply this: Modern diets, superrefined, too often give us too little "bulk food." In such cases, dosing with cathartics and purges gives only temporary relief—the trouble comes back again and again. The way to more lasting relief is to get at the underlying cause and correct it. You can do this by eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN daily. This delicious, tasty cereal supplies the needed "bulk." It acts pleasantly; works principally on the contents of the colon, helping you to have easy and normal elimination. In many cases, eating ALL-BRAN regularly and drinking plenty of water brings lasting freedom from constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is not benefited by this simple treatment, see your doctor.
